

ABSTRACT

An electrical resistor is made by providing a sacrificial layer and conductive pads disposed on a first surface of the sacrificial layer. An electrically resistive material is deposited over the pads and on the first surface of the sacrificial layer to form at least one unit including the resistive material and the pads. At least part of the sacrificial layer is then removed so as to expose one or more of the pads.